

BOSTON COMMON

BSPOT

THE MFA'S NEW LOOK ■ FOREIGN AFFAIRS

WHISKEY WISDOM ■ GREG HILL'S MANTOWN

THEY'VE GOT GAME

Two powerful women
put philanthropy on view.

LINDA PIZZUTI HENRY, a director of the Red Sox Foundation and her husband's personal charity, The John W. Henry Family Foundation, has grown adept at uniting philanthropy with athletics. She recently joined forces with Kelly Boulet, a top-notch entertainment television producer, to create NESN's new lifestyle show After the Game. The women offer a peek into the lives, homes and philanthropic efforts of many of New England's sports stars, including Bruin Patrice Bergeron, skier Bode Miller, Breaker Kristine Lilly, former Patriot Doug Flutie and a few others included in this issue: Patriot Matt Light and Sox slugger David Ortiz. Both Henry and Boulet also give back in their own time—Boulet is on the board of the Commonwealth Shakespeare Company, and Henry, in addition to her foundation work, has been a driving force behind getting the green light for bringing a year-round local public market to Boston. Now that's a team to tune into.

—JANICE O'LEARY

